The Setting: Montmartre's Colorful Streets

The Egg Wagon was painted in 1885, during van Gogh's brief but transformative period in Montmartre, the bohemian heart of Paris.

Montmartre, with its winding streets, vibrant cafes, and bustling markets, provided van Gogh with a rich tapestry of subjects to depict. Among these was the humble egg wagon, a common sight in the city's bustling streets.

In van Gogh's portrayal, the egg wagon is depicted as a vibrant focal point against the backdrop of a lively market scene. The bright yellow cart, adorned with ornate decorations, draws the viewer's attention. Inside, a young woman is carefully arranging rows of fresh eggs, her eyes downcast in concentration.
